PRESS RELEASE

Bike for Peace to Make a Stop in Terre Haute

Terre Haute, IN- Four Norwegian cyclists are on a mission to spread ideas of human dignity, solidarity, and raise awareness of the national and global consequences of the actions of individuals, communities, and nations through an international bicycle tour.

The ride will make a stop in Terre Haute at the Indiana State University Institute for Community Sustainability at 219 North 11th street to give a talk on abolishing nuclear weapons, promote global gender equality, and the environmental benefits of cycling on May 6th at 6:00 PM.

The cyclists began the United States leg of their tour in Kansas City on February 5th after making stops in the United Kingdom, France, China and other nations through the world. The United States tour will end after a visit to Washington, D.C. and meeting with the United Nations in New York, before making the final stop in Norway.

The presentation is free and open to the public.
